100 anon on a book entitled "iran: past and present" by an unidentified famous iranologists. published by soviet academy of sciences. book deals with connection between traditions and current life. major attention is given to continuity of iranian people's revolutionary struggles. refers to various movements in iran during past 60 years and discusses services rendered by heroes of iran's national liberation struggles such as sattar khan and sheykh khiabani. difficult course which sheykh khiabani had to tread from being a religious leader to his emergence as a political party leader and leader of national liberation movement in iran's azerbaijan -- a movement that became a school for future anti-imperialist movements in iran -- is discussed. special attention is given to february 1979 incidents and to how unity of various strata led to fulfillment of revolution's objectives. author who witnessed incidents, concludes diversity of shah's opponents and political immaturity of various strata led to establishment of theocracy which is now persecuting those who were its allies during the revolution. book also discusses islamic republic's economic relations with capitalist world and support and assistance it received from the soviet union, socialist bloc and developing nations during economic siege.
